

Home

The Center for Advanced Studies in Information and Communication Technologies (CEATIC) works in order to support research and teaching excellence as well as to promote knowledge transfer. The objective is to develop a non-profit center that brings together research groups, resources and instrumental resources that allow the advancement of knowledge, development and innovation, in the field of information and communication technologies, through education, scientific research and technological development of excellence.